WOLF DOGS

Won The Great Race In Alaskan Contest

Tacoma, Wash., April 13.—British nobility scored yesterday in dog-racing annals of Alaska by winning the first two prizes in the third annual All-Alaska Sweepstakes, the greatest dog contest in the world. The record for a continuous journey of 412 miles was broken.

Colonel C. Charles Ramsey's team of Siberian wolf dogs finished yesterday noon, covering the distance in 74 hours and 14 minutes. Lord Fox Ramsay's team of the same breed of dogs crossed the line two hours later. Fox Ramsay is a nephew of the winner.

John Johnson, driver of the winning team, was carried on the shoulders of Scandinavian friends to Arctic Brotherhood hall, where a wreath of artificial roses was placed around his neck. Exhausted from three days' effort, Johnson broke down and cried like a babe.

Weather for the race was ideal, the temperature averaging 10 below. In many places the trail was as smooth as glass.

The entire population of Seward Peninsula witnessed the finish. During its progress all business was suspended.

The winning team covered the first 300 miles in 53 hours. The wolf dogs finished in splendid condition, showing greater endurance than Malamutes.

Trophies to the winners are valued at $11,000. A quarter of a million in money and gold dust was wagered on the result.
